A Tale of Two Cities. [From the Chicago Times.]

John Ivins, was on yesterday arrested in this city by Detectives Simmonds and Elliott on the charge of stealing a quantity of jewelry from a lady to whom he had recently paid his addresses in Baltimore. On the person of the prisoner was found a pair of magnificent diamond ear-rings in a box, and a diamond soltaire stud, a splendidly chased, ivory handled, silver-mounted seven-shooter, a second gold watch, and $12 in money, besides some articles of little value.

The prisoner, being asked what had become of the other stolen valuables, stated that he had "put up" a diamond cross and the companion of the soltaire for $60. He denied all knowledge of a pair of bracelets, which he was also charged with taking. The arrest came about in this wise: The Baltimore papers of the 13th instant contained an account of the robbery, which being in most essentials correct, was forwarded to the police departments of the various cities. On yesterday Superintendent Kennedy discovered that a young man had been heard offering diamonds for sale cheap. Out of this slender thread the detectives above named in a few hours manufactured such a pair of handcuffs as sufficed effectually to land Mr. Ivins in the West-side lock-up. The circumstances under which the robberry was committed were refreshingly out of the common every-day run of thieving. The parties move in respectable circles; the their is the son of the wife of one of General Grant's Cabinet officers; the victim is a bewitching wealthy Southern widow; the motive a novel kind of revenge rarely descended to by the most jealous kind of lovers. At one fell blow Ivins kill ed two birds, gratified his jealous phrenzy and filled his own pockets, deprived his faithless sweetheart of her much-loved jewelsjand converted them into greenbacks.

Ivins says he knew the Southern belle long before this happened. He followed her to Battimore from New Hampshire, where he was studying for the legal profession, and where his schooling was broken as he had a state. where his schooling was broken up by a certain cessation of the sinews of war. His worthy and eminently respectable step-father would furnish no more money, and his mamma could not. In this ditemma he proceeded to Baltimore, where he lived on the fat of the St. Clair Hotel, and basked in the sunshine of his lady's smiles, as well as the prospect soon of speedily sharing her bed and her money. The lady boarded at Barnum's. She yielded to the strong attacks of her fortune's besieger. She overlooked the fact that the youth was penniless, an incorrigible step-son of whom an attorney-general might well feel ashamed; she removed her jewels, at his request, from the hotel safe and locked them up in her own boundoir, she walked with him and talked with him, and everything looked well for the weddiog. Then another swell came along and wooed the fickle Southron so ardently that coldness and distrust, sharper than a serpant's tooth, sprang up between the impecunious Ivins and the weather-cock widow. Burning with indignation, and having no more money, even the loose change having disappeared, the spurped suitor soon had his revenge. One fine day madame—the widow—and the successful wooer arranged a little drive together. Heeding the remonstrances of Ivins against her risking her valuable jewels on so ordinary an occasion, she hastily placed them in a casket, locked the casket in a drawer, locked the door of the room containing the drawer, and went forth, unsuspecting and happy. When she returned the door, the drawer, the casket, had all been unlocked, and the jewels—the glorious diamonds—were gone, as well as nearly $700 in cash.

The lightning express landed Ivins in this city a month ago. Fourth avenue, "strange women," driving round, &c., soon thinned his purse. He traded away the cross, then the stud, and had just $12 left to carry on the war with when the detectives pounced on him at Hail's livery stable on Madison street, just arrived from the St. James Hotel, where he boarded.

In appearance Ivins is rather gentlemanly. about five feet seven inches high, tolerably stout built, with flushed cheeks, blue eyes, ever so little a bit of blonde imperial, and short cut fair hair. He speaks and acts like a man of nerve; he is deliberate in speech and calculating in manner. Being arrested was the last thing he expected, and his head seems filled with the notion that the despoiled lady will never proceed against him, or if she did that proceedings could be stayed at any time by his giving up the property.

He acknowledges having taken the articles. refuses to acknowledge the enormity of his offence, and asserts that his object was to "pay her one for taking up with another fellow."
One good trait about the man is, that he did not want his name mentioned in the papers, lest it would reach the ears of his unfortunate mother, whose feelings his conduct must have so fearfully lacerated.

Superintendent Kennedy ordered the arrest on the authority of Baltimore City Marshal Gray, and will hold the prisoner for transmittal to Baltimore.

Crows AND MEN. - Henry Ward Beecher speaks of the crow as follows:

Aside from the special question of profit and loss, we have a warm side toward the crow; he is so much like one of ourselves. He is lazy, and that is human; he is cunning. and that is human. He takes advantage of those weaker than himself, and that is manlike. He is shy, and hides for to morrow what he can't eat to day, showing a real human providence. He learns tricks much faster than he learns useful things, showing a true boy nature. He thinks his own color the best, and loves to hear his own voice, which are evident traits of humanity. He will never work when he can get another to work for him-a genuine human trait. He eats whatever he can get his claws upon, and is less mischievous with a belly full than when hungry, and that is like man. He is at war with all living things except his own kind, and with them when he has nothing else to do. No wonder men despise crows. They are too much like men. Take off his wings, and put him in breeches, and the crow would make a fair average man. Give men wings and reduce their smartness a little, and many of them would be almost good enough to be crows.

This distressing Affection—which renders life miserable and marriage impossible—is the penalty paid by the victims of improper indulgencies. Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue. Now, who that the natural powers are lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms of both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged, the Physical and Mental Functions weakened. DR. JOHNSTON. Member of the Royal College of Surgery of London, Graduate of one of the most emment Colleges in the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known; many troubled with ringing in the head and ears when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended sometimes with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE. Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgence and solitary habits, which ruin both b dy and mind, unfitting them for either business, study, society or mar-

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by the early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symtoms of Consumpwhat is the cause of their declining health, losing their vigor, becoming weak, pale, nervous and emaciated, having a singular appearance about the eyes, cough and symptoms of Consumption. YOUNG MEN Who have injured themselves by a certain practice, already described, a habit frequently learned from evil companions or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the pride of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyment of deviating from the life by the consequence of deviating from the path of nature, and indulging in pernicious habits. Such persons must, before comtemplat-

Indeed, without these tre journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage, the prospect hourly darkens to the view, the mind becomes shadowed with despair, and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another is blighted with our own.

DISEASES OF IMPRUDENCE. When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds that he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-tuned sense of shame or dread of discovery deters him from applying to those who, from edu-cation and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease makes their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a borrid object of commisseration till death puts a period to his dreadful suffering, by sending him to that undiscovered country "from

It is a melancholy fact that thousands DIE victims to this terrible disease, through falling into the hands of ignorant or unskilful PRE-TENDERS, who, by the use of that deadly Poison, Mercury, &c., destroy the constitution, and incomplete of curing them the unharmy sufand incapable of curing, keep the unhappy suf-ferer month after month taking their noxious or injurious compounds, and instead of being re-stored to a renewal of Life, Vigor and Happiness in despair leaves him with ruined Health to sigh
